

Living Donor RN Coordinator for Transplant Services

TH CLINICAL TECHNICAL SERVICES TRANSPLANT SR. SPECIALIST

University Hospital of Brooklyn, a 376-bed tertiary acute care hospital which is the primary teaching institution for the State University of New York Downstate Medical Center is actively recruiting a Living Donor Coordinator/TH Clinical Technical Services Transplant Senior Specialist for its transplant program.

This newly created position offers significant leadership and administrative opportunities to increase our living donor transplant volume. In addition to donor evaluation and clinical care, there will be responsibilities in marketing and program development; therefore, strong interpersonal and organizational skills are essential.

All Downstate staff are expected to pursue excellence in clinical medicine, research, and education. The hospital, along with its adjacent medical school campus, serves a very large and socioeconomic diverse patient population.

Duties and responsibilities are not limited to the above position description.

Qualifications:

- Registered Nurse (Associate Degree but Bachelor of Science in Nursing is preferred).
- New York State RN license required.
- Previous experience functioning in a similar role within an academic medical center that has a robust transplant program is preferred.
